Church Apologizes To Gays

July 1, 2022 by sd

A Catholic church in Kentucky held what it called a “Service of Atonement and Apology to the LGBTQ+ Community” on Thursday night – the final night of Pride Month.

Saint Paul Catholic Church in Lexington posted a copy of the program to its Facebook page saying the service was an apology to the community for “the Church’s lack of respect, compassion, and sensitivity and for unjust discrimination.” The service was led by the church’s director of Catholic LGBTQ+ ministry. In a letter titled “Apologies and Reconciliation,” the director wrote: “The words the Church uses to describe me still sting, but I believe we are witnessing the evolution of doctrine, so I have hope. I know many LGBTQ+ persons – far too many – have been hurt by the Church and many have left. So have their families and friends. LGBTQ+ persons left with good reason: to survive. Apologies aren’t coveralls for the past wounds, but they are a beginning.”

No Thanks, FBI. I’d Sooner Download an App Directly from the CCCP.

I’ve Seen This Movie.

Headline: “Swimming Resumes at 2 Long Island Beaches After Shark Bites Lifeguard in Chest.”

Me: Um. I think I’ve seen this movie.

Related Headline: Long Island shark attack: Beaches reopen with drones on patrol.

Related snark: It’ll be nice to know that my grisly death will be recorded via drone. Now, if you tell me that the drone is equipped with anti-shark missiles then I might go back into the water. But until then...
