

American TFP Finishes Historic Campaign With Rally in Honolulu

October 2, 2020 | Michael Whitcraft

In early June, the American TFP set out with an ambitious goal. They planned to pray the rosary publicly at every state capital and in as many US territories as possible. In the face of the overwhelming chaos and confusion that currently reigns in America, these prayers would ask the Blessed Mother to bring her blessings and restore order over this land.

After four months of efforts, the goal was reached on September 19, when the final rosary rally was held at the State Capitol Building in Honolulu at the feet of the famous statue of St. Damien of Molokai that stands there.

Around 60 Catholics attended the event in spite of strict Covid regulations that have many Hawaii residents in a state of panic. Nevertheless, attendees were overcome by a feeling of joy at having participated. That is why they remained at the location for more than a half an hour after the event, engaging in lively conversation.

Justice Department Calls on San Francisco Mayor to End “One Congregant” Rule for Places of Worship to Comply with the Constitution

The Justice Department today sent a letter to San Francisco mayor explaining that the city’s policy of only allowing a single worshiper in places of worship regardless of their size, while allowing multiple patrons in other indoor settings including gyms, tattoo parlors, hair salons, massage studios, and daycares, is contrary to the Constitution and the nation’s best tradition of religious freedom.

“That we are dealing with a very serious public health crisis does not permit government to discriminate against religious worshipers by imposing a one-person-per-house-of-worship rule while permitting larger numbers of people to gather in tattoo parlors, hair salons, massage studios, and other places. There is no pandemic exception to the United States Constitution and its Bill of Rights.”

Trump vows to ‘protect the Catholic Church’ at prestigious Catholic fundraising dinner

Fri Oct 2, 2020 - 3:13 pm EST

NEW YORK, October 2, 2020 (LifeSiteNews) – President Donald Trump stated his commitment to defend religious rights and even to “protect” the Catholic Church in a speech streamed as part of yesterday’s 75th annual Al Smith Dinner virtual event.

“I will protect the Catholic Church and I will defend the rights of religious believers of every race, religion, color, and creed,” he said at the event.

Most say it should be illegal to discriminate on the basis of religious belief in NSW Australia

Members of the public overwhelmingly support extending anti-discrimination laws in New South Wales to protect religious believers and organizations, a parliamentary report has revealed. In New South Wales it is legal to discriminate against a person on the basis of their religious beliefs or activity, including by refusing to provide them with goods, services or accommodation, simply on the basis of their beliefs.
